Town-wide Bioblitz
May 20-21

The Windham Conservation Commission, in partnership with Moosewood Ecological LLC, is conducting a multi-year biodiversity study on Town-owned properties. From wetlands to wildlife and from fungi to forests, our local ecosystems provide many valuable services that improve the quality of life here in Windham. We invite you to participate in this Town-wide study by sharing your observations of nature through iNaturalist, a community-science database. Any photo or audio recording of an organism can be uploaded to iNaturalist via your phone, iPad, or computer, which makes contributing easy! To learn more about the ongoing biodiversity study and how you can participate, join us for an online training on May 2nd. A Zoom link will be shared on the Conservation Commission's website (<https://www.windhamnh.gov/282/Conservation-Commission>). Residents can also gather in-person at the Town Offices at 3 North Lowell Road to watch the live training, and a recording will be made available to those who could not attend online or in-person.

Following this training, a two-day Town-wide bioblitz will be held in late May. During this fun, family-friendly event, we will collectively record as many species as possible within Windham during a single weekend and document them with iNaturalist. While this event will be our official, public kick-off for the biodiversity study, observations may be contributed to iNaturalist at any time. Exploration of Town-owned properties and your own backyards is encouraged. Please seek landowner permission if you venture elsewhere for the bioblitz! Moosewood Ecological staff will be on-site at various Town properties to answer questions and assist with the inventory.
